The Epiphany of the Lord

The Gospel reading is Matthew's story of the visit of the Magi to the infant Jesus. It is very likely that Matthew was well aware of the Isaiaic prophecy (First Reading) as he told the story of the visit of the Magi, since numerous details align: the "nations" (the Magi from the East) came and gathered around the newborn Jesus; the Magi were "radiant" ("overjoyed") at what they saw; "gold and frankincense" were brought as gifts to the newborn and in praise of the Lord. It is apparent that Matthew saw the prophecies of Isaiah fulfilled in the visit of the Wise Men.

In addition to fulfilling prophecy, the story also foreshadowed the contrasting reactions to Jesus and his public ministry: people were either threatened by Jesus or they were attracted to him. On the one hand, there is the reaction of the Temple leadership in Jerusalem—they rejected Jesus. Rather than rejoice at the prophecies being fulfilled, the religious leaders and "all Jerusalem" were "greatly troubled" by the prospects of the birth of the Messiah. The people and religious leaders in Jerusalem were not open to the gift that God was offering the world. But for others, like the Wise Men from the East, representing the other nations of the world, the news of the birth of the Christ brought them great joy. And so too, the words and deeds of Jesus brought joy to many who experienced him in his public ministry. Many rightly paid "homage" to Jesus in his public ministry like the Magi.
